

Summer Reading Program Guidelines

- Summer Reading Program typically runs June and July.
- The program is open to Pre-K thru Adults.
- Participants are not competing against each other. Rather they are challenging themselves with individually set goals.
- The Summer Reading Program should be fun for you child. If they are a reluctant reader, find books about things they are interested in, even if they are above their ability. If they would rather play than read, recognize the value of lessons gathered from such experiences. Childhood does not last long.
- Children should attempt to read books on or above their reading level/grade level if possible, but can read below their level. It is up to the parents to determine that.
- Each books counts as one book, no matter how long it is.
- If you read to your child, and both are registered for the program, it counts on both of your logs.
- Books listed on reading logs can be checked out from the library, eBooks, audio books, or part of your personal library collection. You can count any book except magazines, newspapers, periodicals, etc.
- Preschoolers are included because being read to is a powerful tool to becoming a life-long reader. Parents and grandparents who maintain a log for their preschoolers should indicate "NON-READER" or "READ TO" on the reading log.
